Greg- We have a few concerns about the letter.

First, the letter doesn't fully describe EPA's role in the TMDL development process. Second, we think the commitment to host a meeting this fall might set a challenging timeline. Could a commitment to a stakeholder meeting be given without a specific time frame? Third, instead of saying "planned approach," it might be more appropriate to call it a "proposed approach." You use this language later in the letter, and it recognizes that we're presenting a proposal in order to get stakeholder feedback. Last, instead of saying that "EPA will make every effort to be sure that," would it be more accurate to say, "An invitation to participate in the stakeholder meeting will be sent," or something along those lines?

Given that you are trying to send this out tomorrow, these are our comments based on a quick review.

Ed, Greg,

As discussed, attached is the letter that we received from DC Water back in March, plus our draft response. We'd like to get this out the door by COB tomorrow, if possible. Let me know if you guys have any comments. Thanks.
